Sensatano Deappolour returned from Italy about ten days ago Deappolouir left Coleman early in December, 1911, in commany with a number of other Italians as a volunter to fight for his native courty against the "terrible" Turk. He claims having be the height of the most desperate conflicts, coming out without even a scar. He says he turned over the Turks by the thousand and was instrumental in saving the liver of General Semusso, the officer in command, and a captain and corporal, carrying each bodily poral, carrying each bodily a diviance of elegant " refug-and relief. The general and cor-poral had both sustained broken arms, and the captain a boven leg. For his connection therewith Schastano Deappolonir received three medials of reward from the Italian government.
